McAdoo Calls Capt. Stephen O'Brien to Run the Detective Bureau, and Sets Some Steuths Quaking-Patrol Duty for the Has Beens Who Won't Rettre.

Inspector George W. McClusky relinquishes command of the Detective Bureau at noon to-day and goes up into The Bronx. At the same time Patrick H. McLaughlin

It was not known before that McClusky had asked to be transferred out of the Detective Bureau. The impending transfer has, however, long cast its shadow before. McCluskey's dispute with Eggers may have had its share in bringing about a crisis which became the occasion of the change, but it played only a minor part, the experts say. The real causes, they believe, dated further back and have been indicated from time to time in the Commissioner's expressions of dissatisfaction with conditions in the Detective Bureau. A week or more ago, the Commissioner wanted O'Brien to take the place. O'Brien's ambition was in his traffic schemes and he did not want to give them up, particularly as he had just been given new powers and was engrossed in systematizing the whole scheme, including the gathering of the bicycle men into one squad from all the precincts. The Commissioner placed a high value on that work and was loath to take O'Brien out of it. He let the matter go. Then he saw O'Brien again and finally decided he had greater need for him in the Detective Bureau Bureau since March, 1903. O'Brien and McClusky have superseded each other before in that bureau. O'Brien with his "side partner," John McCauley, still in the bureau, made a remarkable record for arrests conference. and recovery of stolen property. When O'Brien, then a detective sergeant, was put in command of the bureau by the Roosevelt board to stir things up, a large number of detective sergeants were reduced to patrolmen and sent on post, among them McClusky and Titus. These two, through civil service examinations, rapidly became regular sergeants. O'Brien also, through a new law, became a patrolman, still retaining his command, but early in 1896 he was promoted to a sergeantcy.

When McCullagh became chief he put O'Brien on precinct duty and called Sergt. McClusky back to command the detectives. McClusky became a captain, and then Devery, announcing McClusky was getting "too chesty," put him out. Greene made in 1903 and then put hin

In the meantime O'Brien as captain in the wholesale district was doing such good work in regulating trucks and truck drivers that the merchants, when he was transferred, protested, and had him sent back. McAdoo has given him greater opportunities in this traffic work and recently gave him the rank of acting inspector.

The transfer of Inspector McLaughlin came to him as a thunderbolt. When he heard of it his face flushed and then turned lyn and Queens, the inspector was in charge of about forty precincts. As a district in-spector, he will have only about seven precincts. He has never been popular with the rank and file. He has been a martinet and made officers and men toe the mark. He is 60 years old. He has been the mark. He is 60 years old. He has been in the department since 1886 and is a war veteran. On Dec. 15, 1900, he and the then Chief, William S. Devery, had a stormy scene in Mulberry street head-uarters, when Devery referred to McLaughlin as the man who wore a high hat with a sack coat. The result of this row was that McLaughlin was deprived of the command of Brooklyn and changed places with Inspector Elias P. Clayton, who was then in command of Queens county. McLaughlin went to Queens county, but refused to give up the keys to his room and desk at the then Smith street headquarters, Brooklyn. up the keys to his room and desk at the then Smith street headquarters, Brooklyn. Hugh McLaughlin objected to the transfer, and inside of a week Commissioner Murphy rescinded his order and McLaughlin was again put in charge of Brooklyn. He has remained undisturbed until now.

inspector is $3,500.

McLaughlin's removal from the borough inspectorship in Brooklyn is believed to be solely because the Commissioner thinks be solely because the Commissioner thinks he is not active enough to handle the job. The next move, it is said, will be to bring him before the board of surgeons, along with three or four more inspectors, ten or more captains and half a hundred or more captains and half a hundred or more sergeants with a view to enforced retire-

At the same time Patrick H. McLaughlin ceases to be borough inspector of Brook. Yn; he is superseded by Albert A. Cross, who took Albertson's place in The Bronk when the latter was reduced to the rank of captain. Acting Inspector Stephon O'Brien, the traffic regulation man, goes back to the head of the Detective Bureau, where he made a good record at the time when Roosevelt was at the head of the police force.

The announcement yesterday of these transfers of inspectors caused more commotion in the department than any of the other shake-ups of Mr. McAdoo's régime. They are in line with all the recent announcements of his policy.

The list of names to be brought before the police surgeons with a view to enforced retirements will be ready to-day. In this connection the Commissioner is in-The Commissioner expects the work of

In this connection the Commissioner is informed he has legal authority to send out any officer, whatever his rank, to do actual patrol duty, and in case any old men show a surprising amount of youthful health he is considering, as an extreme measure, the plan of assigning them to such duty. In any event, he has made up his mind to send a lot of the clerical force, with which he had found considerable fault lately, out on the streets.

The Commissioner, when he announced the transfers yesterday, passed out the slip containing the order, and declared he would not discuss the matter except in a brief statement which he had dictated to his secretry. This statazient by the Commissioner, given out by Secretary Howell, was as follows:

These changes are made solely by me, or my own judgment and with my own knowledge of the situation, and without any outside influence whatever.

Two detectives, Strebbins and McVea of the West 152d street station, notified Capt. Halpin yesterday that they suspected there was a poolroom in the flathouse at 305 West 150th street. With a couple of cops, Capt. Halpin got into the apartments on the second floor. They found about fifteen men. Frank Kaiser, Charles Clark and Frank Bennett were arrested on sus-picion that they were the proprietors. A telephone, racing sheets and dope cards were also found.

THE SANCTITY OF HOME LIFE

President Roosevelt Gives His Views on Marriage and Divorce and Race Suicide,

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.-President Roosevelt gave this afternoon, with much emphasis, his views on the sanctity of home iterated his well known views on the dimin- saying that the meeting has no political ishing birth rate in American families. The American family life must be preserved as a sacred institution, he said, or everything else worth having will be in vain.

The occasion for the President's remarks was a formal call of about twenty-five members of the interchurch conference on marriage and divorce. The delegation was headed by Bishop Doane of Albany, and the reception took place in the East Room at the White House. Bishop Doane introduced each member of the conference to the President and said that they had some to him freely to receive some ward. come to him freely to receive some word from him in regard to the objects of their conference. Mr. Roosevelt then addressed in dealing with our public questions, and public men especially are apt to get their attention concentrated on questions that have no importance, but are wholly ephemeral compared with the questions that go straight to the root of things. Questions like the tariff and the currency are of literally no consequence whatseever compared with the vital question of having the unit of our social life, the home, preserved.

"It is impossible to overstate the importance of the cause you represent. If the average husband and wife fulfil their duties toward one another and toward their children as a Christianity, teaches them dren as Christianity teaches them, then we may rest absolutely sure that the other problems will solve themselves, but if we have solved every other problem in the wisest possible way, it shall profit us nothing if we have lost our own national scul, and we will have lost if it we do not have the question of relations of the family put upon the proper basis. While I do not know exactly what you wish me to do, I can say that so far as in me lies, every-thing will be done to cooperate with you

"One of the most unpleasant and dangerous features of our family life is the diminishing birth rate and the loosening of the marriage tie among the old native American families. It goes without say-ing that for the race as for the individual no material prosperity, no business growth, no artistic or scientific development will count if the race commits suicide. There-fore, Bishop, I count myself fortunate fore, Bishop, I count myself fortunate in having the chance to work with you in this matter of vital importance to the national welfare."

Bishop Doane thanked the President for his remarks and Mr. Roosevelt talked informally with some of the members at the conclusion of his address. In a general way he told them that he was in hearty sympathy with the movement. hearty sympathy with the movement which they were trying to further.
